Two undergraduate students from the University of Nairobi (UoN) have benefitted from a collaborative field course in conservation and research methods in Savannas offered by Goshen College in partnership with the Centre for Sustainable Dryland Ecosystems and Societies (CSDS). The three weeks course which started on 5th June 2013 is being hosted at Mpala Research Centre.

The two range management students; Hannah Nyakio Kamau and Omollo Erick Ouma joined six other students from Goshen College, Indiana, United States and two other students from Karatina University in Kenya. Prof. Ryan Sensenig from Goshen College is the main instructor.

The Course has been designed to help the students experience the lessons they have been learning in class and to have a practical feel of science in action. for more information visit the course blog [8]
